

Investigation demanded on racism at SGWU

Black students at McGill yesterday strongly condemned the controversial cartoon published Nov. 3 by The Paper, a weekly organ of Sir George Williams University and Loyola College evening students, and have called for a Federal Government investigation into racism at SGWU.

The cartoon showed two cannibals setting out for the proposed Black Studies program at SGWU. Black students at the McGill meeting yesterday said that they believe the cartoon to be an editorial response of The Paper to this program.

The meeting of about 40 students drew up a statement, which said, "In our minds, there is a very clear connection between this new manifestation of racism at SGWU and the previous evidences of it which appeared Feb. 11, 1969."

The statement further calls for the firing of the editor of The Paper, Wayne Gray, and of the anonymous cartoonist, for the suspension of The Paper until the issue is settled, and for a federal investigation into racism at the troubled school.

Carl Pariss, a leading member of the black community at McGill, said after the meeting, "As far as we are concerned, the issue of this racist cartoon will not be settled until there is a government investigation."

"It is easy for the SGWU administration to fire the editor and the cartoonist, because they think that they are liberal," he continued. "But racism will happen again at Sir George unless there is an investigation."

The statement released by the meeting today left no doubt that the black students at McGill consider the cartoon to be intolerably racist. "It is an insult to black people, not only here but in the Caribbean, the United States, Africa, and around the world," charges the statement.

It continues, "The cartoon is a blatant example of the type of stereotyped white thinking which has brought so much pain and suffering to black people over the last 400 years."

One person at the meeting commented, "They did us a favour by publishing the cartoon (Continued on page 3)

Council gives funds, SS remains intact

Under the Damocles sword of secession Students' Council last night decided to grant $30,000 to graduate and undergraduate societies.

A decision was made to allocate these funds on a "flexible pro rata basis". This means that each of the faculty societies which have demanded financial support from Council will be granted part of the $30,000 in proportion to the amount of student fees which it contributes to the Students' Society.

The pro rata clause was vigorously opposed by the smaller faculties. Their smaller enrolments mean that they will receive less than what they consider necessary.

Stanley Goldstein, Law representative on Students' Council, stated, "I oppose the principle of pro rata distribution because it is adverse to the future development of the smaller faculties."

"The consequence of this principle", he continued, "is that the smaller faculties will receive meaningless, token allocations."

by NORM TOLLINSKY

Goldstein complained that on the pro rata basis the McGill Law Journal would only receive $990 instead of the $1,500 which it was granted last year. He argued that financial grants should be determined according to the merits of the programmes which each faculty society plans.

The prevailing opinion on Council was that a pro rata basis was the only way of ensuring that the students of larger faculties — espe-

Santhanam attacks Loyola compromise

by LINDA FELDMAN

Dismissed physics professor Srinvasa Santhanam yesterday attacked a joint administration-student compromise on his firing before an estimated 700

Loyola students in the F. C. Smith Auditorium.

The students had convened the meeting to vote on the acceptability of the compromise, after adjourning a meeting Monday in order to consider the matter.

The compromise, which would have given Professor Santhanam $10,000 to leave the university, was rejected by the students today, and a motion calling for arbitration in the Santhanam case was passed overwhelmingly.

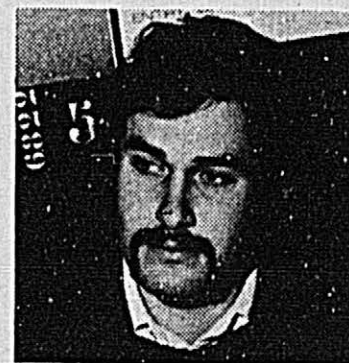

Professor Santhanam claimed that the compromise recommendations made by the committee of students, which included the president of the Loyola Student Association, Marcel Nouvet, and by Father Malone, were never presented to him officially by Father Malone's office. Therefore, he didn't think he could take them seriously.

The professor stated that he had been given until 4 pm yesterday to accept the money, but he rejected the offer, pressing for arbitration instead.

He thanked students for their help, and expressed the hope that none of them would suffer a loss of marks because of their active support for his cause. Otherwise, the whole effort would have been a complete failure, he claimed.

Meanwhile, Nouvet formally announced his resignation to the student body, stating that the absence of a promise for arbitration from the administration had forced him to consider more effective ways of bringing about reforms.

He is considering joining the Loyola Student Movement, a group that will be dedicated to bringing about reforms by disrupting normal campus routine.

cially ASUS — get a fair deal. Finally, however, the smaller faculties were granted additional funds.

Paul Wong, Arts and Science representative, argued that funds given to the smaller faculties in excess of what they would obtain under a pro rata basis would have to come out of the pockets of students in larger faculties. In other words, Arts and Science students would be financing such things as law journals.

Last night's Council meeting resembled a market-place, a bargain basement, and an auction all wrapped up in one as Students' Council reached deeply into its shallow financial resources.

An attempt was made to both pacify faculty societies which threatened to secede if Council failed to come across with enough money and to prevent the Students' Society from putting itself in a situation of bankruptcy.

In addition to the requests from faculty societies, a number of other groups addressed Council asking for financial grants ranging from $1,500 to $10,000.

The names of 21 people will be on the ballot next Wednesday as elections are held to fill the seven seats left vacant by the out-going student senators.

The candidates are: Aspler, Philip, BA 4; Ben-Ouden, Marco E., B Comm 3; Chinloy, Peter, B Comm 4; Desrochers, Jacques, BA 4; da Farthing, Lin, BSc 3.

Gillman, Gary, BA 3; Goldstein, Stanley, BCI 3; Hartmann, Paul, BCI 1; Johnson, Neil, BComm 4; Luchins, Daniel, MDCM 1; O'Connell, Kevin, PhD 1;

In Students' Council by-elections, David T. F. Fung has withdrawn from the election for Engineering Representative, the seat left resigned by Ken Clowes. Consequently, Henry A. Roy, also President of the Engineering Undergraduate Society, has been acclaimed.

Roy's policy statement said, "I will attend all regular meeting of the Students' Society and will work towards the restructuring of the Students' Society into a federation composed of the Undergraduate Societies."

The following people have been nominated to run in the by-elections for Council member from the Faculty of Graduate Studies and Research: Cargill, Gillian; Ettinger, Leon; Sykes, Randy.

In Commerce Undergraduate Society elections for class presidents, Norm Vioner, a secession candidate, won the third-year post by a landslide. The fourth year winner was Terry Norman, second year went to Ivon Picard, and Kit Kenard won first year.

The posts are effective until a year from today and fulfill the functions of activities coordinators, grievance "councillors", etc.

Conference on drugs helps shape attitudes

by ED CHOUKE

The creation a new federal attitude regarding the use of drugs may be helped along by the McGill Conference on Psycho-Active Drugs tomorrow.

The purpose of the conference is to air opinions on drugs and/or to get more information on them from others in the community. Resolutions will be drawn up and presented to the Royal Commission presently studying drug use in Canada.

A panel consisting of prominent local doctors and the Crown Prosecutor of Montreal will give brief talks on their opinions about perception-altering agents. There will then be a question-answer period with the audience.

In order to formulate common points of agreement, the audience will be briefly broken up into smaller groups. Discussions in these groups should lead to common resolutions. These will then be considered by the audience as a whole.

The Conference will be held in the Union Ballroom tomorrow from 1 to 6 pm.

Positions for students are still open on the Senate Committee on Urban Studies and the Sub-Committee on Communications, Film and Related Media. If you are interested, please pick up an application form at the Union Box Office.

The Chaplinesque Barber-chair

Sir:

Like most people, I greatly enjoy George Kopp's cartoons.

It distresses me, however, that he has of late portrayed me as being substantially shorter than Julius Grey.

In fact, I am four or five inches taller than that gentleman.

If not for my sake, then for my mother's, I hope you will clear up this inaccuracy in future cartoons.

"Dialogue Theatre" hominum salvator

Sir,

Yesterday's article on the disruption of Theatre I's Anti-gone by the Theatre Radical Quebecois omitted to mention several important facts.

(1) Theatre I does not hold unanimously to any one political or theatrical ideology. They are a mixed group of students and teachers, anglophones and French-speaking Quebecois. The value of their production is the extent to which diverse and perhaps contradictory attitudes can co-exist and find expression in scenes directed by the individuals themselves with little outside interference from the director.

(2) The fact that the play is bilingual does not reduce it, as Majzels claims, to a "farce" which condemns "the French members of the cast to being traitors to Quebec culture". The very fact that a bilingual group can exist and perform successfully (something which, incidentally the theatre Radical Quebecois cannot claim to do, since they rehearse and perform only in English) indicates the way in which the group is attempting some solution of the language and culture problem in Quebec.

(3) The fact that actors were willing to continue the play and discuss the T.R.Q.'s justification of their interruption after the performance underlines the open-mindedness with which the company approaches its political and creative role. This willingness brought about a successful dialogue in which hopefully both groups could express their attitudes and understand each other's goals better. Perhaps, if this dialogue continues there will arise a better understanding of the uses of theatre as more than a display-case for talent and more than a mouth-piece for a political power-group.

President of the McGill
Players Club.

Decries racist "Sambo" stereotype

Sir,

On the evening of November 3, a cartoon appeared as a supplement to an editorial in the evening students' paper at Sir George. If you have seen the cartoon (which has been circulated around the campus), it was probably quite obvious that it pictured black men in an atypical representation inculcated through the use of mass media, formal educational institutions, etc.

There are, at this time, many repercussions resulting from the cartoon's appearance in The Paper. Among them is a motion to fire Wayne Gray, The Paper's editor. However, I do not wish to cover these issues, as they are being covered elsewhere. Rather I would like to consider that which (in my opinion) is more basic to the issue at hand and the universal problem of racism.

As long as one's first impression of a black man continues to be "Little Black Sambo", we will never see an end to the practise of racism. I ask the following question. How long will we, as individuals, continue to tolerate the subtle inculcation of racial prejudice in our "free and egalitarian society"? Peter Kerr BA4

Investigation...

— now we have proof to show the government and public opinion in the West Indies of the racial problem at SGWU."

Meanwhile, at Sir George, white students are preparing libel charges against editor Gray. Black students in the Caribbean Student Association are not participating in the pressing of charges, as erroneously reported in the Daily yesterday.

To formulate their plans of action, the Caribbean Students' Association will hold an open meeting at SGWU tomorrow at 1 pm.

There is also another meeting at McGill today from 12 to 2 pm in Union B26 to discuss the cartoon.

Meanwhile, through it all, Gray has maintained, "The Paper in no way condones racism or overtly offensive statements as its policy."

Commentaire

Ce soir - une conférence

Québec est en train de passer par des bouleversements rapides. Je voudrais passer en revue les événements des dernières semaines.

Vendredi dernier, au moins 30,000 personnes ont manifesté dans la ville de Québec, non seulement contre un Bill qui reconnaît et légitime les privilèges accordés à la minorité par notre système d'éducation, mais aussi contre un gouvernement qui, de toute évidence, ne veut pas changer l'orientation actuelle de la société québécoise. Les manifestants de vendredi sont venus des quatre coins de la province, et il n'y avait pas seulement des adolescents de 14 à 16 ans, mais il y avait d'étudiants plus âgés et d'adultes, aussi.

Au début de la semaine dernière, les étudiants et les élèves des CEGEPs, ainsi que les élèves des écoles secondaires, paradèrent, à plusieurs reprises, dans les rues de Montréal, pour manifester leur opposition au Bill 63 et au gouvernement provincial.

L'importance de ces événements est primordiale dans l'histoire du peuple québécois, un peuple dominé pendant si longtemps par une Eglise conservatrice et autoritaire, et par un gouvernement colonial. (Comment décrire la période depuis la "Conquête" de 1763?)

On a assisté, au cours de ces derniers mois et de ces dernières années, au réveil du peuple québécois, surtout les jeunes, mais de plus en plus, les adultes, aussi. Les élèves des écoles secondaires même, ont montré un esprit de solidarité en marchant dans les rues avec leurs aînés. Ces élèves se sont montrés aptes à juger par eux-mêmes sur le rôle que le gouvernement provincial joue dans l'histoire présent du Québec.

L'autre aspect important de la situation actuelle, c'est l'élargissement de la révolte étudiante en une contestation de plus en plus globale de la société francophone québécoise face à un gouvernement qui dessert les intérêts de la majorité.

Où allons-nous? Il y a des anglophones qui disent, "C'est le temps de passer de l'autre bord pour participer à la révolution. On n'a plus rien à faire dans le milieu bourgeois anglophone".

Etant socialiste et humaniste, je ne peux pas accepter cette idée-là: la négligence par les radicaux anglophones du progrès à accomplir dans leur propre milieu. Oui d'accord, peut-être que la révolution socialiste est en train de se faire. Oui d'accord, il faut travailler avec le peuple québécois, pour arriver à une nouvelle définition de la société où nous vivons. Mais, il y a un bon nombre d'anglophones qui ne comprennent même pas à quoi cette lutte veut aboutir.

Je prends comme acquis qu'aucun changement important ne se produira dans la vie quotidienne des québécois sans un changement fondamental dans le système économique actuel et dans le système de valeurs acceptées.

Donc, la lutte doit s'orienter vers une nouvelle définition de l'ordre économique, un socialisme démocratique. Cela est réalisable à long terme.

C'est pourquoi nous, à McGill, devons examiner notre rôle dans la société québécoise: pas nécessairement prendre position tout de suite; ce n'est pas possible, pour la plupart. Réfléchir et en discuter. Essayer de voir la situation, ses problèmes, ses contradictions. Ensuite, prendre position et travailler avec les francophones à but commun.

Il y a un symposium qui se tient à McGill, commençant ce soir, jusqu'à dimanche, sur Le Rôle de McGill au Québec. Engageons-nous.

Demands from such groups as the International Students' Association, the McGill Student Health Organization, the Jeanne Mance Youth Clinic, and the Legal Aid Program were haggled over, suspiciously evaluated, and then passed with modifications.

K.H. Lee, the president of the International Students' Association, stated, "I feel that Council has not considered our needs in light of the exact knowledge of the ISA and the internationalism at McGill. We are opposed to our being manipulated by a Council which has no representation of the ISA."

The ISA was granted about $8,000. The Legal Aid Program was given $10,000., the McGill Student Health Organization was given $5,000, and the Jeanne Mance Youth Clinic was granted a total of $2,000.

Council's generosity did not extend to the Weatherman faction of the Chicago SDS which has petitioned the Students' Society for a $1,000 grant to be used as bail funds. The general consensus on Council was that the McGill Students' Society should not support this revolutionary group.

David Young, Internal Vice-President of the Students' Society, decided to retract his earlier decision to boycott Council meetings until it becomes a body effectively representing McGill students.

In a statement issued at last night's meeting, Young said, "From the point of view of personal political tactics, I probably used the wrong one."

In other business, the date of November 12 was set for the principalship poll. So far eight names have been nominated. They include Michael Oliver, Robert Shaw, Stanley Frost, E.J. Stansbury, Davidson Dunton, John Summerhill, Sven Orvig, and Donald Theall.

Further nominations for a successor to Principal H. Locke Robertson can be made either by petition bearing 100 signatures or by approval of Students' Council.
